Acknowledgements

Over the several years since 1997, when planning began for a workshop on 'Postcoloniality and the Question of Modern Indonesian Literature' at the University of Sydney, we have incurred many debts to those who have helped us along the way and without whose support the Sydney conference and this volume of essays could never have come into being. To the former School of Asian Studies at the University of Sydney, and especially to Professor Peter Worsley, the editors owe many thanks for financial and logistical support. To the Faculty of Arts at Sydney University, which provided a grant, and the Centre for Performance Studies, which offered its performance space over the weekend of 28-31 May 1998 as the workshop venue, we express our gratitude. The Ford Foundation in Jakarta, Indonesia, with extraordinary generosity and expeditiousness, provided air fares and grants-in-aid as well as logistical help in organizing visas and air tickets for the Indonesian participants in the workshop; our thanks especially to Dr. Jennifer Lindsay, formerly Project Officer with the Foundation, for that crucial support. A Large Grant which we received from the Australia Research Council to carry out our own further research on postcoloniality and modern Indonesian literature for 1999-2001 also assisted with the production of this volume. The project research assistant, Suzan Piper, helped in searching for and acquiring copies of some of the materials used in our own essays and provided assistance in countless ways, intellectual as well as editorial, as the book neared completion. At a crucial stage, Selina Wrighter and Craig Campbell proved to be highly skilful and efficient indexers. To them all we owe a continuing terima kasih.

Our greatest debt is to the participants of the workshop itself. Over three days and nights we read, discussed and debated the issues at the Centre for Performance Studies or in Sydney restaurants with the invited paper givers as well as a large group of unfunded but most welcome auditing participants who contributed in major ways to the intellectual quality and excitement of the event. Conferences devoted entirely to the subject of modern Indonesian literature are rare anywhere in the world; we share the view we heard on many sides that the Sydney workshop was one of the best ever. This was due to the degree of enthusiastic involvement displayed by all of those who took part. We owe a special debt of gratitude to the late Fr. Y.B. Mangunwijaya, whose particular contribution is described in detail in our introductory remarks to this collection. In addition, we are particularly grateful to those whose excellent papers are not included in the present volume: Ninuk Kleden, Toeti Heraty and Suryadi from Jakarta; Budi Susanto and Faruk from Yogyakarta; Yoseph Yapi Thaum, at that time from Dili; Sylvia Tiwon from Berkeley; Savitri Scherer from Paris; Edwin Jurriëns from the Netherlands; and Jacqueline Lo, Helen Gilbert, Joost Coté, Wendy Mukherjee and Pamela Allen from Australia — all contributed invaluable essays that were as important to the intellectual range and quality of the workshop as those that form the basis of this collection. We want to give a special thanks to Jacqueline Lo of the Australian National University and Helen Gilbert of the University of Queensland, both specialists in literatures other than Indonesian and both eminent scholars of postcoloniality, who agreed to present a keynote paper on 'Postcolonial theory; Possibilities and limitations' that was illuminating to all the participants in the workshop and which helped us most especially to frame the issues that inform the shape the volume as a whole.

Our list of people to thank would not be complete if we did not mention Sarah Weiss, who cooked and organized catering for the delicious conference dinner and who gave birth the next day to Samuel Francis Day-Weiss.
