ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book is the final outcome of a project that was supervised by James Booth at the University of Hull. His constant moral and intellectual support, as well as the questions he never failed to raise about the whole endeavour, were crucial in making this book what it is, and indeed in making it possible at all. I also owe great personal and intellectual debts to my fellow student and friend Yug Chaudhry and to my tutor John Kelly at the University of Oxford. My conversations with them germinated many of the ideas that eventually led to this book. I would also like to thank various persons whose suggestions, comments and encouragements all proved valuable: David Gervais, Tim Kendall, Phyllis Lassner, Angela Leighton, George Myerson, Christine Pagnoulle, Neil Rhodes, Terry Whalen. Needless to say, the author remains solely responsible for any shortcoming that they were not able to set right, and the opinions expressed in this book do not necessarily reflect theirs.

My project was funded by the Ferens Trust and the University of Hull, where I was Larkin Memorial Scholar for three years. My work there was greatly helped by the friendliness of the staff of the English Department and of the Philip Larkin suite in the Brynmor Jones Library, and by the Philip Larkin Society’s injections of cheerful enthusiasm. Victoria Carpenter’s friendship and sense of humour were invaluable and steady supports through the highs and lows of scholarly life.

Earlier versions of parts of this book first appeared in different collections and journals. A shorter version of chapter one was published as “The Uses of Symbolism: Larkin and Eliot” in New Larkins for Old, ed. James Booth, London, 1999. Parts of chapter three and four were merged into essays that appeared as “Mapping the Misreadings: Ted Hughes, Seamus Heaney, and Nationhood” in Contemporary Literature, XL/4 (1999), and as “Decolonizing Ireland/England? Yeats, Seamus Heaney and Ted Hughes” in W.B. Yeats and Postcolonialism, ed. Deborah Fleming, West Cornwall, 2001. Parts of chapter six were reworked into two articles that were published as “England and Nowhere: Contestations of Englishness in Philip Larkin and Graham Swift” in English, XLVIII/190 (1999), and as “Seamus Heaney and the Importance of Larkin” in Journal of Modern Literature, XXIII/3-4 (2000). Acknowledgements are respectively due to Macmillan, the University of Wisconsin Press, Locust Hill Press, the English Association and the University of Indiana Press. I also thank the anonymous readers of those publications for their comments.