ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This grammar is the end product of over a quarter century of study of Classical Hebrew. In that time I have been taught by some remarkable teachers and scholars. I owe a debt that cannot be repaid to Dennis Pardee of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. He has consistently modeled what a true scholar is. Not only did I have the privilege of studying under his tutelage, but he took the time and care to read an earlier version of this manuscript and carefully edit it, with a comment on practically every one of its over five hundred pages. He also had his students read that manuscript, and I was the beneficiary of their remarks. This grammar is vastly improved because of his work. Of course, I am responsible for the inevitable errors that creep into a book of this size and complexity. I also thank Roy Hayden, who first introduced me to the glories of studying Hebrew. To John Kutsko for encouraging me to pursue publishing this work, I give my heartfelt gratitude. Bob Buller is the best editor that an author could want. His knowledge of Hebrew had its impact on more than one of the pages herein. Besides being my friend, he first encouraged me to pursue publication of this grammar. Finally, thank you Patrick Alexander for seeing the value of this work and including it in Brill’s catalogue.
