ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book is the culmination of the mutual efforts of scholars in the fields of Judaism and Islam, and it demonstrates their appreciation for the seminal scholarship of Professor William M. Brinner. We would like to thank each of the contributors for their cooperation in the compilation of this volume.

There are many institutions that have helped us in bringing this project to completion. We would particularly like to acknowledge the generous support of the Jewish Studies Enrichment Fund, the Institute for Jewish Studies, and the Department of Middle Eastern Studies—all of Emory University. We would also like to acknowledge the generous support of the Department of Near Eastern Studies of the University of California at Berkeley as well as the generous support of Brigham Young University.

Furthermore, there are many people whose scholarly, moral, and financial support proved instrumental to the project. We would like to thank in particular Yael Abraham, David Blumenthal, Uri Horesh, Gordon Newby, Stephen Ricks, and David Katz who encouraged us to publish this volume in his series.

Last but not least, this project could have never been completed without the devoted and meticulous editing of Jennifer Quijano, who not only took upon herself the unrewarding task of copy editing, but also read every word in the book, offered penetrating editorial and scholarly comments, and compiled the indices under the pressure of time.
