PREFACE

Developed from a suggestion by Harold Jantz of the Johns Hopkins University, this examination of the literary activities of Christoph Daniel Ebeling presents the results of research conducted in Hamburg, Göttingen, and in the United States. I would like to express my gratitude to Professor Jantz, and to Professor Gerhard Friesen, also of Johns Hopkins, for their assistance in the preparation of this study.

I would like also to acknowledge the generous fellowship I received from the Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst which enabled me to conduct research in Hamburg, Ebeling's home of nearly fifty years. While in Hamburg, I made extensive use of the volumes, journals, and manuscripts of the Staats- und Universitäts-Bibliothek; to the courteous and helpful staff of this library, in particular Frau Rose Marie Hurlebusch, Frau Sabine Rademacher, and Werner Kayser, I express my thanks. Further, I would like to thank the officials of the Niedersächsische Staats- und Universitäts-Bibliothek in Göttingen who enabled me to have access to several previously unknown letters by Ebeling to his former professors, Christian Gottlob Heyne and Johann David Michaelis. For her careful reading of the manuscript in its numerous drafts I am especially grateful to Mary Evelyn Stewart. And lastly, I would like to acknowledge the generous assistance of my wife Margaret, who continually offered her encouragement from the initial outline to the publication of this work.
