Notes on Contributors

Scot A. Marciel (M.A) is Oksenberg-Rohlen Fellow at Walter H. Shorenstein Research Center, Stanford University, USA. He was a 2020–2022 Visiting Scholar and Visiting Practitioner Fellow on Southeast Asia at APARC. He is the author of Imperfect Partners: The United States and Southeast Asia (2023). He served as former U.S. Ambassador to Myanmar from March 2016 to May 2020, leading a mission of 500 employees during the difficult Rohingya crisis and a challenging time for both Myanmar’s democratic transition and the US-Myanmar Relationship. Priority to serving in Myanmar, he also served concurrently as the first U.S. Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Southeast Asia from 2007 to 2010. He is actively involved in advocacy for Myanmar’s contemporary democracy movement.

Elijah Young (Ph.D, pseudonym) was educated in the United States. He has published dozens of articles in scholarly journals, edited books, and popular magazines in Asia, Europe, and the United States. His research interests include religion, politics, and history in Southeast Asia.

Tun Myint (Ph.D) is Professor and Chair of the Department of Political Science, Carleton College, USA. He is the author of Governing International Rivers: Polycentric Politics in the Mekong and the Rhine (2012). He was one of the student leaders of the 1988 revolution in Myanmar. He served as a member of the Technical Advisory Team of the Federal Constitution Drafting Coordinating Committee of the Union of Burma (2000–2005) and was Research Fellow of Asia Policy Program. He is a co-founder and editorial member of Independent Journal of Burmese Scholarship and of Mutual Aid Myanmar, which helps fund Civil Disobedience Movement participants against 2021 coup for their loss of income, shelter, and medical needs.
Timothy C. Geoffrion
(Ph.D) is a Visiting Professor of New Testament and Practical Theology at Myanmar Institute of Theology, Myanmar. He teaches one semester annually in Myanmar (since 2009). He is ordained with the American Baptist Churches, USA (1984). Under the auspices of Faith, Hope, and Love Global Ministries, a ministry he and his wife co-founded (2008) and of which he is the president. In addition to publishing his dissertation on the rhetorical purpose of the book of Philippians, he has authored four books on practical spirituality for Christian leaders. Since the February 2021 military coup in yanmar, his research interest has become more sharply focused on the intersection of spirituality and suffering.

David Thang Moe
(Ph.D) is Rice Postdoc Associate and Lecturer in Southeast Asian Studies at MacMillan Center for International and Area Studies, Yale University, USA. At Yale, he teaches some courses on religion, conflict, and reconciliation in SE Asia, and colonialism, nationalism, and identity in Myanmar. He is the co-editor of Public Theology for Global Witness (2023), the author of Pyithu-Dukkha Theology (2017), and over 70 scholarly articles. He is working on a book project about the politics of Buddhist nationalism, ethnic identity, subaltern resistance to the coup, and ethnic reconciliation. As a public theologian, he is a featured speaker about Myanmar at Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Princeton, Brown, Boston, Oxford, Cambridge, Toronto, New York University, Hamburg, Australian National University, National University of Singapore, Chinese University of Hong Kong, Yonsei, many other universities and media outlets. He is on the editorial team of International Journal of Public Theology; Interreligious Studies and Intercultural Theology; and Asian American Theological Forum.

James C. Scott
(Ph.D) is Sterling Emeritus Professor of Political Science and Professor of Anthropology at Yale University, USA. He is the Founding Co-Director of the Agrarian Studies Program. He was an auditor at Yangon University (1958–59). His Burmese name is ကျိုဆိုးလှိုင်း. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 2020, he was awarded the Albert O. Hirschman Prize by the Social Science Research Council. His research concerns political economy, comparative agrarian societies, theories of hegemony and resistance, peasant politics of Southeast Asia, theories of class relations and anarchism. His influential books include, Weapons of the Weak (1985), Domination and the Arts of Resistance (1990), Seeing Like a State (1998), The Art of Not Being Governed (2009), and others. He is working on an eco-biography of the Ayeyarwady...
River. He is actively involved in advocacy for Myanmar’s democracy, and is a co-founder of Mutual Aid Myanmar, which helps fund CDM participants against 2021 coup.

Layang Seng Ja (Th.D) is Associate Professor of New Testament at Kachin Theological College and Seminar, Myanmar. She is Head of New Testament Department and Director of Research Publication at KTCS. She has published a book The Pharisees in Matthew 23 Reconsidered (2018) and some scholarly articles. Her research interests include Jesus and Judaism, ethnic minority, and gender justice. She formerly worked as a Burmese-Chinese-Kachin interpreter at Kachin Independence Organization (KIO) after she got her Diploma in Chinese from Yunnan Institute of Language and Literature, Kunming, China.