Publisher's Note

Brill would like to inform the readers of Mnemosyne that after many years of excellent editorial work, Irene J.F. de Jong has stepped down as member of the editorial board of Mnemosyne. She played an important role in maintaining the high standards of the journal and developing the journal as a forum for innovative research in classical literature.

We are pleased to announce that Casper C. de Jonge (Leiden University) has been appointed as her successor and has taken up this role very expeditiously already.

Additionally, we would like to seize the opportunity to thank Stephen Harrison and Annette Harder for their roles in the Advisory Board of the journal over the course of many years. Their guidance and their involvement with the journal have been highly appreciated. They will be succeeded by Irene Peirano Garrison (Yale University) and Jacqueline J.H. Klooster (University of Groningen).

We warmly welcome Casper de Jonge, Irene Peirano and Jacqueline Klooster on board and wish them all the best in their respective positions.
