Contributors

Adam Barrows

is Professor in the Department of English Language and Literature at Carleton University in Canada. He is the author of two books on time and literature: The Cosmic Time of Empire (California, 2011) and Time, Literature, and Cartography After the Spatial Turn (Palgrave, 2016). He has published widely on the subject in such venues as Journal of Literary & Cultural Disability Studies, James Joyce Quarterly, Modern Fiction Studies, and Modern Language Quarterly. He is a recipient of the Margaret Church Memorial Prize (Purdue, 2010).

Ricardo Uribe

is a historian and anthropologist. He has studied at the Universidad de los Andes (Colombia), holds a master’s degree from the Universidad de Salamanca (Spain) and is currently a PhD candidate at the Freie Universität Berlin (Germany). He was a research fellow of the Temporalities of Future programme of the Lateinamerika-Institut with the project entitled: Clocks for the New World: A History of Universal Time. From Lima to Greenwich (1584–1884). He specialises in studying global synchrony from the Iberian expansion in the New World since the 16th century. His most recent papers on the subject are: “El calendario gregoriano en el Nuevo Mundo. Historia Global, cultura escrita y tiempo universal” (2022), and “Indios anónimos en los albores de la sincronía global: Charcas, Tlatelolco y Zhaoquin en 1584” (2023).

Kinga Tucholska

is PhD, psychologist, independent researcher, and cognitive-behavioral psychotherapist. From 2005 to 2023 a research and teaching fellow at the Institute of Applied Psychology, Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Poland. Author and co-author of three monographs and dozens of scientific articles mainly in the fields of psychology of time (time perspectives, temporal competence, subjective time experience), psychology of individual differences, and psychology of climate change.

Bożena Gulla

is PhD, specialist in clinical psychology, assistant professor at the Institute of Applied Psychology at the Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Poland. Author and co-author of several monographs and numerous scientific articles. Her areas of interest include climate psychology, psychotherapy and forensic psychology and psychosomatics.

Małgorzata Wysocka-Pleczyk is PhD assistant professor at Andrzej Frycz Modrzewski Krakow University, Poland, clinical and forensic psychologist; co-editor of three books on forensic psychology and five books on psychological issues of the Internet; co-author of the articles entitled Proactivity of inmates, their hope and future anxiety, Temporality and the crisis, Spatial metaphors of psychological time: the study of imprisoned men.

Przemysław Piotrowski
is PhD assistant professor at the Institute of Applied Psychology, Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Poland. Author and co-author of over 100 publications, including 7 books and articles in respected scientific journals. Specializes in crime psychology and penitentiary psychology.

Stefan Florek
is a philosopher and psychologist. He holds a PhD in philosophy and is an adjunct academic at the Institute of Applied Psychology of the Jagiellonian University in Krakow. His current research interests include the cognitive-evolutionary approach to morality, crime, offender rehabilitation, aggression and axiological experience. He is the author and co-author of about 50 scientific publications.

Martyna Sekulak is a PhD at the Institute of Applied Psychology, Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Poland and currently does research on psycholinguistics, as well as narratives regarding intimate partner violence. She has co-authored several articles on negation processing and metaphorical conceptualization of concepts. She is a member of the Polish Social Psychology Society.

Kaja Glomb is a PhD student, specializing in psychology of eyewitness testimony with a keen interest in exploring individual differences in emotionality and cognitive styles related to this issue. Her research interests extend to the domain of police interviews and deception detection, and she is particularly interested in the development of modern methods to study eyewitness testimony, with a special emphasis on the use of Virtual Reality (VR) technology. In addition to her work in psychology, Kaja Glomb also holds a degree in archaeology and occasionally collaborates with archaeologists on projects concerning social archaeology.

_Eric Kincanon_

is a Professor of Physics at Gonzaga University. In 1987 he received his PhD from the University of Missouri in the area of Quantum Scattering Theory. His publications have addressed inverse problems in scattering theory, physics pedagogy and the metaphysics of time. Along with the typical range of undergraduate physics courses he regularly teaches a course on the philosophy of time.

_Alexandra Ksenofontova_ is a postdoctoral researcher at the Cluster of Excellence “Temporal Communities: Doing Literature in a Global Perspective,” with a project on present-tense fiction. She holds a PhD in comparative literature from the Freie Universität Berlin. Her award-winning first book _The Modernist Screenplay: Experimental Writing for Silent Film_ (Palgrave Macmillan, 2020) explores the conjunctions between literary modernism and the screenwriting of the European avant-gardes. Her other publications include articles on film, screenwriting, and contemporary Anglophone fiction; she is also active as a literary translator.

_Brad Aeon_

is PhD at Concordia University and a time management researcher and consultant. His research interests typically cover a multidisciplinary approach to temporality, including the history, sociology, and psychology of time. His articles have been published in various outlets including _Academy of Management Perspectives, Organization Studies, and Current Opinion in Psychology._

_Jo Alyson Parker_

is a Professor Emerita of English at Saint Joseph’s University in Philadelphia, where she has taught courses in narrative and time. Her publications include _The Author’s Inheritance: Henry Fielding, Jane Austen, and the Establishment of the Novel; Narrative Form and Chaos Theory in Sterne, Proust, Woolf, and Faulkner;_ and essays dealing with narrative and time in texts by early modern to postmodern writers. She has co-edited three volumes in _The Study of Time_ series: _Time and Memory; Time: Limits and Constraints;_ and _Time in Variance_. From 2014–18, she was managing editor of _KronoScope: Journal for the Study of Time_, and she recently guest-edited a special issue of the journal commemorating the hundredth anniversary of J. T. Fraser’s birth.