Co-Managing International Crises: Judgements and Justifications,

by Markus Kornprobst (Cambridge University Press, 2020).

The jury from the HJD international advisory board awarded Co-Managing International Crises as a significant theoretical and empirical contribution to the crisis management literature and wider scholarship on diplomacy.

Praise for Co-Managing International Crises:

“Co-management and Co-operation are essential activities in today’s international environment where states can hardly achieve anything anymore on their own, and this book offers an important scholarly contribution to better understand the mechanisms and scope conditions for such interactive processes.”

“This outstanding book develops a whole new framework for appreciating how states act diplomatically, drawing on a host of productive concepts such as the perimeter of judgement, resonance and structuration circuits. The empirical analysis is deep and extremely rich.”

“Co-managing International Crises: Judgements and Justifications: for its theoretical rigor and ambitions and for a very careful and interesting empirical analysis...it is truly about diplomacy.”
