In memoriam: John Scarborough

It is with sadness that Brill publishers and the editors of Studies in Ancient Medicine have learned that John Scarborough passed away on 26 June 2022. At the time of his death John was Professor Emeritus at the School of Pharmacy and the Departments of Classics and History at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Most important to us has always been John's role as founding editor of Studies in Ancient Medicine at a time when our subject was only beginning to attract serious attention in the academic circles of the New World among faculty and students of Classics, Greek and Latin languages and histories. It is John's energetic and never-wavering commitment in the early days that not only caused our subject itself to develop, flourish, and grow. Current interest in the study of the medicines of long ago owes much to John Scarborough and the joy he brought to his work in our field. We acknowledge his many contributions to the scholarship of ancient medicine and its pharmaceuticals with gratitude and fond remembrance.

— Philip J. van der Eijk, Ann Ellis Hanson, Brooke Holmes, Orly Lewis, Joseph Ziegler, Editorial Board Studies in Ancient Medicine