Stockholm Studies in Child Law and Children's Rights

Series Editor: Said Mahmoudi, Stockholm University
 General Editor: Pernilla Leviner, Stockholm University

This series of studies on child law and children's rights seeks to provide timely and high-quality analyses of all issues relating to the interface of children and adolescents with their surrounding societies. The focus is on legal research results, but multi-disciplinary child-right-related studies also have an obvious place in the series. The diversity of contributions will be maintained by including scholarly works by academics and scholars from all geographical areas.

Economic Consequences of Divorce in Korea

Hyunjin KIM, Inha University School of Law, South Korea

Korean divorce law still adheres to fault-based divorce. According to a majority of the Supreme Court, the main reason for not admitting a no-fault policy is that the preconditions for systems for financially protecting the spouse and children after divorce have not yet been satisfied in Korea. However, there is not much time left, so we must use this golden time for preparing protective measures for divorced women and their children, through legislative efforts.

Edited by Maarit Jäntere-Jareborg and Hélène Tigroudja

Despite global undertakings to safeguard the full enjoyment of human rights, culture, traditional practices and religion are widely used to discriminate against women. In this volume 17 scholars approach women's human rights globally, regionally and nationally, combining the perspectives of public and private international law in a hitherto unique manner.
