‘Entré en tant que cousin, sorti en tant que gendarme’

Visa Balladur, Kwassa Kwassa, (im)mobilité et géopoét( h)i que relationnelle aux Comores

Rémi Armand Tchokothe, University of Vienna

« He came as a cousin and left as a gendarme. »

This anecdote expresses the identity paradox in the Comoros and the ‘migration’ drama that has been happening in the Archipelago since the arbitrary introduction of the Balladur Visa in 1995. Mayotte that is ‘officially’ French has been labelled “the biggest marine graveyard in the world”.

How can works of imagination on “migration” from Anjouan to Mayotte constitute a kind of collective social therapy and social intervention? This book answers this question (among others) by studying 18 works, and combining literary studies with anthropology, sociology, history and international law.

READERSHIP: Scholars and post-graduate students of African Comparative Literatures; Indian Ocean Literatures; African Studies at large; Africa-Europe Studies Specialists; Comparative Migration Studies; International Law; Artists and Activists of the Decolonial Turn.
The Amorites

_A Political History of Mesopotamia in the Early Second Millennium BCE_

_Nathan Wasserman_, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and _Yigal Bloch_, The Bible Lands Museum Jerusalem

This study of the political history of Mesopotamia – today’s Iraq and Syria – in the Old Babylonian period (ca. 2000-1600 BCE) is the first comprehensive historical synthesis of this kind published in English after many decades. Based on numerous written sources in Sumerian and Akkadian – royal inscriptions, letters, law collections, economic records, etc. – and on up-to-date research, it presents the region’s political history in a meticulous geographic and chronological manner. This allows the interested academic and non-academic reader an in-depth view into the scene of ancient Mesopotamia ruled by competing dynasties of West Semitic (Amorite) origin, with a complex web of political and tribal connections between them.

READERSHIP: The book is intended for readers interested in the history of the ancient Near East, including graduate and post-graduate students, academic institutions and libraries.

Italy for Sale

Alternative Objects - Alternative Markets

Edited by Denise M. Budd and Lynn Catterson

In the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, Italian Renaissance art, objects, and even the idea of Italy itself figured heavily both in the dynamic international art market and in the eyes of the general public. The alternative objects that were actively dispersed and collected -- authentic works, pastiches, Renaissance-inspired counterfeits, and reproductions -- in the diverse media of paint, plaster, terracotta, and photography, had a tremendous impact on visual culture across social strata. These essays examine less studied aspects of this market through the lens of just a few of the countless successful sales of objects out of Italy.

READERSHIP: Academic libraries and institutes, researchers, curators, collectors, dealers, auction houses, post-graduate students interested in the History of Collecting and Collections, History of the Art Market, Visual Culture.

Empirical Approaches to Linguistic Theory, 20
Heretics in Revolutionary China
The Ideas and Identities of Two Cantonese Socialists, 1917–1928

Xuduo Zhao, Peking University

In this book, Xuduo Zhao revisits the early twentieth-century Chinese revolution by focusing on two forgotten Cantonese socialists: Chen Gongbo and Tan Pingshan. By analyzing a host of previously untapped primary sources, Zhao discovers a social democratic approach within the newly founded Chinese Communist Party and argues that its decline marked a key moment in the Chinese communist movement. The study of these two figures, and the ebbs and flows of their lives, reflects and reveals the fundamental tensions in the Chinese revolution which have shaped China's political trajectory to contemporary times and the broader political, social, and cultural landscapes of Republican China.

READERSHIP: University departments, libraries, and institutes interested in Asian studies; scholars and students of twentieth-century Chinese history, Chinese politics, or global socialist and communist movements.

Images of Torah:
From the Second-Temple Period to the Middle Ages
Jeong Mun Heo,
Yeshiva University

Mani and Augustine: collected essays on Mani, Manichaeism and Augustine gathers in one volume contributions on the gnostic ‘apostle of Jesus Christ’ Mani and his influence on St. Augustine made by the internationally renowned scholar Johannes van Oort.

This volume rediscovers the intriguing power of parables to transform daily life into ethical-religious dynamics.

This book presents an innovative phenomenological approach to the images of Torah in the history of Jewish and Christian thought. It explores their relationships to hypostatic mediators, such as Wisdom and Logos, and considers their roles in religious experience.

READERSHIP: All interested in historical, cultural, theological and philosophical questions.

READERSHIP: This book is relevant for students and scholars of Theology, Religious Studies (Late Antiquity), Rabbinic Judaism, the New Testament, the History of Christianity, Comparative Religion, and Folklore Studies.

READERSHIP: The book will interest Jewish studies students and scholars of interrelated fields, such as Biblical studies, theology, and religious studies, as well as the history of Jewish and Christian thought.

Cartouches on Early Modern Maps
Chet Van Duzer

This lavishly illustrated book is the first systematic study of cartographic cartouches, the most important element in interpreting historic maps—and the most visually engaging. It explores four centuries of cartouches, focusing on examples with particularly rich symbolism.

Vernacular Books and Their Readers in the Early Age of Print (c. 1450–1600)
Anna Dlabačová, Leiden University, Andrea van Leerdam, Utrecht University, and John J. Thompson, Queen’s University, Belfast

This volume explores approaches to study vernacular books and reading practices across Europe in the 15th-16th centuries. It highlights connections between vernacularity and materiality from distinct perspectives: real and imagined readers, mobility of texts and images, and intermediality.

READERSHIP: This book will be of interest to historians (in particular of maps, mapping, and cartography), regional specialists, art historians, geographers, material scientists, colour researchers, collection specialists, and museum curators.

READERSHIP: The book will be of interest to historians of cartography, map collectors, historians of art, historians of the decorative arts, historians of the book, emblem scholars, and research libraries.

READERSHIP: Scholars and students interested in early printed books in Europe, vernacular book production, readers and reading practices, and in interdisciplinary approaches to the materiality of print.

Philodemus' History of the Academy represents a valuable treatise on Greek philosophical schools containing much unique information on Plato and on the development of the Academy under his successors. The so called Index Academicorum is a draft version preserved in a Herculaneum papyrus, which has been reread and reedited on the basis of innovative papyrological criteria and pioneering imaging techniques. The text is now very different from former editions and reveals countless new facts on various Academic philosophers. The edition and the commentary provide new insights of interdisciplinary relevance into ancient philosophy, biography, literature and the ancient process of writing a book.

READERSHIP: University libraries, specialists, post-grads, researchers, classics, philosophy (ancient philosophy), papyrology, ancient history epigraphy, archaeology, literary studies.

Lessons of Belonging
Art, Place, and the Sea
John Baldacchino, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Prompting this book is the paradox of belonging. What pushes the author to write are art’s questions. Rather than take the route of writing, artists in academia could opt for the studio, teaching students, and occasionally indulge in conferences and symposia. However, beyond such rituals, writing art's questions remains akin to art's acts of belonging. In these lessons of belonging this is done through art's paradox. Belonging is a matter of art because art belongs to the aporia that writes it.

READERSHIP: Readers interested the art, culture and education, particularly those focusing on race, the Mediterranean and post-colonial studies. This also includes aesthetics, political theory, cultural anthropology, and related interdisciplinary fields.

The Future of Teacher Education
Innovations across Pedagogies, Technologies and Societies
Pascal Hohaus, Leibniz Universität Hannover

Varieties of the Self
Peter Abelard and the Mental Architecture of the Paraclete
Babette S. Hellemans

Varieties of the Self discusses human perspectives of the Paraclete (founded in 1129) on sacrifice, intentionality, and views on body and soul. The anthropological approach connects different works written by Peter Abelard to views on the individual within this community.

READERSHIP: Those interested in medieval intellectual history, monasticism, poetry, and performative studies, and how the historical anthropological approach may give new insights into (female) images of the Self.

Performative Literary Culture
Literary Associations and the World of Learning, 1200-1700
Arjan van Dixhoorn, University College Roosevelt, and Susie Speakman Sutch, Berkeley

Performative literary culture emerged as a set of practices that shaped production and distribution of learning in late medieval and early modern Western Europe. Written by a team of experts, this book explores how regional and local performative literary cultures shaped the exchange of learning between the oral, theatrical, and literary spheres.

READERSHIP: All interested in the literatures, urban cultures, and the festive and ritual cultures of late medieval and early modern Western Europe, and those interested in the intersection of learned and more popular spheres.

This collection demonstrates the centrality of transnational perspectives for elucidating the complex inter-relationship between Netherlandic and European literary history, 1200-1800. The Low Countries were a dynamic site for new literary production and transnational exchange shaping the intellectual landscape of premodern Europe.

The Covenant with Moses and the Kingdom of God
Thomas Hobbes and the Theology of the Old Covenant in Early Modern England
Andrew J. Martin

Conscription, Conscientious Objection, and Draft Resistance in American History is the definitive history of conscription in America. It is the first book ever to consider the entire temporal sweep of conscription from pre-Revolutionary War colonial militia drafts through the end of the Vietnam era.

READERSHIP: This title will be of interest to history students, peace historians, general historians, legal historians, and lawyers.

Using 9/11 as a window, this book seeks to analyse the history of terrorism through case studies from Greece and Rome to present day.

READERSHIP: This book will be of interest to academics and students in terrorism studies and disciplines relevant to each chapter, as well as popular readers with an interest in 9/11’s historical context.

This book explains the explosion of books about the old covenant with Moses in early modern England, demonstrating how and why Thomas Hobbes and his contemporaries debated biblical theology as they fought for legitimate political order.

READERSHIP: This work will appeal to scholars and researchers working on seventeenth-century theology and political philosophy, as well as to specialists working on Thomas Hobbes, the history of Presbyterianism.

This book is the first to explore the rich festival culture of late sixteenth- and early seventeenth-century France as a tool for diplomacy. Bram van Leuveren examines how the late Valois and early Bourbon rulers of the kingdom made conscious use of festivals to advance their diplomatic interests in a war-torn Europe and how diplomatic stakeholders from across the continent participated in and responded to the theatrical and ceremonial events that featured at these festivals. Analysing a large body of multilingual eyewitness and commemorative accounts, as well as visual and material objects, Van Leuveren argues that French festival culture operated as a contested site where the diplomatic concerns of stakeholders from various national, religious, and social backgrounds fought for recognition.

READERSHIP: Everyone interested in the early modern history of diplomacy and festival culture in France and the political, diplomatic, and religious history of sixteenth- and seventeenth-century Europe more generally.

Contact with Extraterrestrial Intelligence and Human Law
Michael Bohlander,
Durham University

Humans are unlikely to be the only intelligent species in the universe. Contact may occur at any time. It may be peaceful or hostile. This book argues that we need a global consensus on how to respond in either scenario.

READERSHIP: Practitioners and academics in law, international relations and politics, philosophy, sociology and the military.
Fast Track
A Legal, Historical, and Political Analysis (2nd Edition)
Hal S. Shapiro and John Gilliland

Fast Track tells the story of the negotiating authority behind the rise of U.S. leadership in international trade. This statutory authority embodied a bipartisan consensus that has lapsed. Hal Shapiro and John Gilliland recount this history and describe how to rebuild that consensus.

READERSHIP: International trade lawyers, government relations specialists, law libraries (law professors and students), think tanks with a focus on Congress, international trade, and/or U.S. economic relations and diplomacy, foreign diplomats.

The EU's Conceptualisation of the Rule of Law in its External Relations
Case Studies on Development Cooperation and Enlargement
Lisa Louwerse

This book explores how the EU understands the ‘rule of law’ in its external relations: the main argument advanced is that the Union has adopted a mostly ‘institutional’ approach to the concept by focusing largely on judicial reform.

READERSHIP: This book is of interest to academics in the field of rule of law (and its promotion), to practitioners and policymakers at the national, EU, and international level alike.

EU Withdrawal as a Supranational Affair
The Case of Brexit
Polly Polak

Leaving the EU, in line with the singular nature of this unique organisation and as evidenced by Brexit, is a supranational affair that imposes considerable legal and procedural constraints on a Member State’s right, process and outcome of withdrawal.

READERSHIP: EU and Public International Law scholars with a legal, political science or international relations background; Legal, political science and international relations libraries in universities and other academic and public institutions.
Human Flourishing: The End of Law
Essays in Honor of Siegfried Wiessner
Edited by W. Michael Reisman, Yale Law School, and Roza Pati, St. Thomas University College of Law

This rich volume is an homage to the significant impact Professor Siegfried Wiessner has had on scholarship and practice in many areas of international law. It is also a collection of thought-provoking, original essays, exploring topics as diverse as theory about law, human rights, the rights of indigenous peoples, the rule of law, constitutional law, the rights of migrants, international investment law and arbitration, space law, the use of force, and many more – all integrated by the problem and policy-oriented framework of what has come to be known as the New Haven School.

A Global Handbook on National Human Rights Protection Systems
Edited by Bertrand Ramcharan, Gianni Magazzeni, Mona M’Bikay and Ines French

This book is a veritable State of the World Human Rights Report. It discusses in detail the national human rights protection system of UN Member States based on summaries transmitted to them by UN High Commissioners for Human Rights.

Reflections on International Law
Studies in Honour of Lindy Melman
Edited by Tim McCormack, University of Tasmania

For 40 years Lindy Melman has been a publisher in heart and soul. Some of the authors she encountered along the way have dedicated an essay to her to celebrate this milestone.

This book contains essays written by leading human rights and international law scholars from different parts of the world, discussing a wide range of topics, from indigenous peoples to the persistent relevance of the travaux préparatoires of the Genocide Convention and the conflict between EU law and international investment law.

READERSHIP: UN delegates, Members of NGOs, Academics, human rights institutes, libraries, human rights specialists, postgraduate students, practitioners, educated laymen.
The Duty to Investigate in Situations of Armed Conflict

An Examination under International Humanitarian Law, International Human Rights Law, and Their Interplay

Floris Tan

This book explores States’ investigative obligations during armed conflict in a comprehensive manner. It examines in-depth both international humanitarian law and international human rights law, as well as their interplay. It moreover presents a novel understanding of interplay, applicable more broadly.

READERSHIP: Academics, practitioners, students in the field of public international law, international humanitarian law, international human rights law. University libraries.

The Nile in Legal and Political Perspective

Between Change and Continuity

Mahemud E. Tekuya, Oregon State University

This book explores the legal and hydro-political trajectories of the Nile Basin as the region, caught between increased demand and dwindling supply, faces a looming water crisis. Mahemud Tekuya brings a crucial multidisciplinary lens to his analysis of one of the world’s most history-rich watercourses.

READERSHIP: Policymakers, researchers, scholars, and students interested in the sustainable management of international watercourses, the use and allocation of the Nile River, the legal regime governing the Nile Basin, or the history and geopolitics.

Military Ethics and the Changing Nature of Warfare

Edited by Jean-François Caron, Nazarbayev University/University of Opole, and Marina Miron, King’s College London

Military Ethics and the Changing Nature of Warfare discusses whether or not the ethical rules of warfare are keeping pace with the changing nature of human conflicts.
The right of peoples to self-determination seems well-settled and covered extensively in the scholarly record. Yet old Trotsky’s question – of whom is this right and to what? – haunts the self-determination literature. Somehow almost every work on it begins with an expression of puzzlement. This right turns out to be elusive, underdefined in its scope and content, paradoxical in almost every aspect. This book mobilises all powers of critical legal theory and modern philosophy to take the bull by its horns.

READERSHIP: The book is addressed principally at academic libraries, scholars in international law, critical legal theory and political philosophy as well as practitioners of international law (judges, lawyers, diplomats, teachers).

Based on a detailed analysis of the complete codified field of State succession and the relevant elements of State responsibility, this book introduces new observations, which can be applied to highly disputable succession to State responsibility.

READERSHIP: The book is of immediate relevance for students, professors and practitioners of state succession and state responsibility as well as international organizations, institutes, and libraries covering these two areas.
Implications of Pre-emptive Data Surveillance for Fundamental Rights in the European Union

The Responsibility to Protect and Counter-terrorism

Contradictions and Congruences

Shannon Zimmerman, Deakin University

The Responsibility to Protect and Counter-Terrorism both ‘came of age’ at the turn of the millennium, as the international community was grappling with the challenges emerging from the end of the Cold War. R2P embraced the value of the individual, while counter-terrorism emphasized the importance of the state. Each appeared to represent a distinct way of understanding security. However, as these two concepts have evolved through contestation, application, and reform, surprising points of conflict and congruence have emerged which open up new ways of understanding what it means to protect both civilians and the state.

This collection of essays was first published in the journal Global Responsibility to Protect (vols. 14 and 15, 2022 and 2023).

READERSHIP: Scholars and practitioners of humanitarian intervention, peace operations, disaster response and counter-terrorism; international relations, international humanitarian law, and political science. Organizations such as The United Nations, the European Union, NATO.

In the Court of the Gentiles

Narrative, Exemplarity, and Scriptural Adaptation in the Court-Tales of Flavius Josephus

David R. Edwards, Florida State University

Edwards explores how Josephus in Antiquities adapts the scriptural stories of Joseph and Esther in unexpected ways as models for accounts of more recent Jewish figures. Terming this practice “subversive adaptation,” Edwards contextualizes it within Greco-Roman literary culture and employs the concept of “discourses of exemplarity” to show how Josephus used narratives about past figures to engage Roman elites in moral reflection and pragmatic decision-making. This book supplies analysis of frequently overlooked accounts as well as Josephus’ broader literary strategies, and shows how ancient Jews appropriated imperial historiographical conventions and forms of discourse while countering Greco-Roman claims of cultural superiority.

READERSHIP: Academic libraries, graduate students, and scholars in the areas of Ancient Judaism, Biblical Studies, Religious Studies, and Classics.
NEW AND FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS

Code Copying
The Strength of Languages in Take-over and Carry-over Roles
Lars Johanson, University of Mainz

This book presents Lars Johanson’s Code-Copying Model, an integrated framework for the description of contact-induced processes. The model covers all the main contact linguistic issues in their synchronic and diachronic interrelationship. The terminology is kept intuitive and simple to apply.

Embodyment in Cross-Linguistic Studies
The ‘Heart’
Edited by Judit Baranyiné Kóczy, University of Pannonia, and Katalin Sipőcz, University of Szeged

This book offers novel insights into the figurative meanings of the ‘heart’ across 19 languages, including endangered and extensively studied ones. The selection of papers employ diverse perspectives, primarily the frameworks of cognitive and cultural linguistics and also formal methodologies.

Colour Terminology in Modern Irish
A Comparative Study
Mark Ó Fionnáin, the John Paul II Catholic University of Lublin

This work is the first to take a detailed look at the usage and range of basic colour terms in Irish, and its sister Gaelic languages, on the basis of a comprehensive investigation of lexicographical and didactic works, placenames, proverbs and fieldwork with native speakers.

READERSHIP: The book is primarily aimed at undergraduates and postgraduates of linguistics and language and those with an interest in the manyfold aspects of language contact processes, language endangerment and death.

READERSHIP: Researchers of Cultural Linguistics, pragmatics, cognitive semantics, ethnography and cognitive anthropology; Educational Researchers; Students of linguistics and ethnography, intercultural linguistics; teachers of language.

Silymarin Puzzle

From basic science to practical applications in human and veterinary medicine and nutrition

Peter F. Surai and Anton Surai

For the last 30 years, polyphenols were in the centre of research work worldwide. Silymarin, an extract from a medicinal plant Silybum marianum, also known as milk thistle, has a special place in this group, having been used in human medicine for the management of liver diseases since ancient times. Accumulating scientific evidence indicates that silymarin is characterised by a wide range of protective pharmacological activities and this topic has received tremendous attention in recent years. However, until now there has been no single monograph addressing major questions related to silymarin chemistry, biochemistry and practical applications.

The goal of this book is to provide up to date information about silymarin chemistry, biochemistry and molecular mechanisms of protective actions of this phytochemical with a special emphasis to its vitagene- and transcription factor-modulating properties. Silymarin applications in human diseases, including hepatoprotection, neuroprotection, anti-diabetic, anti-arthritis and other protective activities are reviewed. Immunomodulating, anti-inflammatory, anti-toxic protective activities of silymarin are characterised in detail. Practical applications of silymarin in poultry and animal industry with a special emphasis on its protective roles in gut health maintenance are also presented.

READERSHIP: This book will be of practical importance to medical and pharmaceutical scientists, including medical doctors, pharmacists, consultants, etc. as well as to poultry/animal scientists, poultry producers, nutritionists and vets, as well as to students of medical, biological and agricultural backgrounds.
Narcissus? A burglar? An illusionist? The dandy invents his own roles and hides his face behind multiple masks to confuse his audience. From Fortunio to Arsène Lupin, not forgetting the dandy woman, from Saint-Just to Romain Gary, the sixteen studies in this book present an exceptional gallery of figures that delineate the history of dandyism.

READERSHIP: The book is intended for researchers working on dandyism in French culture and literature, but it may also appeal to aficionados of this phenomenon.

The volume revisits the concepts of feminisms and sororities seen as political solidarity to then further explore feminist and sororal views that are more personal, perceived as forms of solidarity and mutual aid between women all while respecting individual identities and different points of view.

READERSHIP: This book is relevant for specialists in literary studies, comparative studies, studies on intermediality, feminist studies, and gender studies.

This study offers new and original insight into the behaviour of Médée, Clytemnestre and Phèdre in the works of Pierre Corneille, Jean Racine and Hilaire-Bernard de Longepierre by drawing on cutting edge methodologies from philosophy (ethics of care), psychoanalysis (transactional analysis) and performance theory.

READERSHIP: Scholars and students in the French Studies academic community in United Kingdom, Europe and the United States. But also for those with an interest in Early Modern Studies particularly tragedy.

Scotland’s Harvest
Scottish Poetry and World War Two
Richie McCaffery

There is much academic coverage of World War One but World War Two was as much a poet’s war. There has been no attempt until now to look at the impact of the war on Scottish poets of the era.

READERSHIP: This book should be accessible to a range of people interested in the fields of war poetry and Scottish literature, from students through to scholars and to poets and creative writers.

The Sonnets of Thomas Pringle
Migration and Poetic Form
Patrick Lenahan,
University of Pretoria, South Africa

In 1820 Thomas Pringle emigrated to South Africa taking the sonnet with him. This work shows how he used it to capture his colonial experiences and open the Romantic-era sonnet itself to new, southern realities from within.

READERSHIP: Academic libraries; specialists / post-graduate students focussed on: South African poetry; Scottish 19th century poetry, specifically of the Scottish diaspora; Romanticism; The literature of Empire; Anti-slavery / abolitionist poetry.

A Century of Italian War Narratives
Voices from the Sidelines
Edited by Luigi Gussago,
La Trobe University, Melbourne, and Pina Palma, Southern Connecticut State University

The volume explores Italian war narratives from the perspective of individuals largely excluded from the pages of official history: female partisans, deserters, POWs, and satirists among others. These unsung heroes’ actions offer novel insights into the contradictions of warfare rhetoric.

READERSHIP: This book will interest researchers and students, as well as non-academics, for its focus on literary, gender, feminist, socio-historical and political studies in Italian society during WWI and WWII.
New Perspectives in Edward Albee Studies, 5

Albee Abroad

This edition modernizes Chaucer's Middle-English translation of Boethius's The Consolation of Philosophy so that students of Chaucer can easily engage with his version of a text that influenced many of his most important works.

READERSHIP: This book is of immediate interest to undergraduate and graduate students studying Geoffrey Chaucer's works.

Chaucer's Translation of Boethius's The Consolation of Philosophy
A Modern English Rendering
Translated, edited, and with an Introduction by Conan M. Griffin, Florida Gulf Coast University

A diverse collection of texts that take Edward Albee's theatre beyond the Anglophone sphere, examining the reception and impact of his works in different linguistic, cultural and socio-political contexts.

READERSHIP: Universities, schools and institutes of humanities and arts (especially in the theatre/ drama area); drama and theatre students and practitioners in general; libraries with sections about US theatre and literature.

Choice in Charles Dickens's Later Novels
The Spectator's Art
Keith Easley

How much choice do you have in life? Charles Dickens's dramatisation of the relationship between characters and their audiences within his novels reflects upon us: in spectating spectators, readers engage in a dynamic of sameness and difference that will define and decide the struggle for choice in our own lives.

READERSHIP: Academics and (post)graduates interested in Victorian literature and cultural studies; history of the Novel; Charles Dickens studies; comparative literature; Bakhtin studies; theories of spectatorship; performance studies.

Paul E. Walker, University of Chicago

Philosophies on Qur’anic hermeneutics in contemporary Turkey are relatively uncharted. In Critical Hermeneutics, Çelik explores and compares the hermeneutical philosophies of three Turkish intellectuals, namely Alpyağıl, Cündiğolu, and Öztürk.

The book is not only aimed at scholars and students of the Ottoman Empire; the thematic range is also of interest to linguists, historians, and cultural historians.

Studies of a Shi‘i caliphate and Fatimid rule over its Mediterranean and Near Eastern empire, 909 to 1171 AD. Separate chapters cover books, science and libraries, court society, festivals, intellectual traditions and Ismaili doctrines, its religious appeal, military, enemies and rivals.

READERSHIP: Students and specialists (including their institutions and libraries) that are interested in contemporary Islamic thought, modern theology in Turkey, and Qur’anic hermeneutics.

READERSHIP: Students and scholars of Ottoman Studies, turkologists, historians, linguists, historians of the Middle Eastern, students and scholars of European history, historians of diplomacy, cultural studies.

READERSHIP: Anyone interested in the history of the Isma'ilis and/or Islamic Egypt in the medieval period.

La version arabo-latine de la Rhétorique d'Aristote

Édition, introduction, apparats critiques

Frédérique Woerther
avec l'aide de Gaia Celli pour l’Index verborum potiorum latinorum

This volume contains the first critical edition of Aristotle’s Rhetoric in its Arabo-Latin translation made by Hermann the German (d. 1272). It also contains a full study of the manuscript tradition of the Latin text and sets out the principles used in the edition, which takes account of the Arabic version of the Rhetoric. A brief presentation of the text completes the volume.

READERSHIP: All interested in the transmission (and translations) of Aristotelian philosophy in Arabic to the medieval Latin tradition, Aristotle’s Rhetoric, the Arabo-Latin language, historians of rhetoric, as well as institutes interested in holding critical editions of central philosophical texts.

Al-Anwār al-Qudsiyya fi Bayān Ādāb al-ʿUbūdiyya is an early text by the Egyptian Sufi ʿAbd al-Wahhāb al-Shaʿrānī (d. 973 H/1565 CE). This first critical edition of the book is based on a new manuscript. This edition also includes a comparison with previous incomplete editions.

READERSHIP: All interested in the history of the ʿAbd al-Wahhāb al-Shaʿrānī, Islamic Sufism, pre-modern Arabic literature.

The ʿAlā and Kaṣr Ibn Wardān

written by Butler and translated by Aisha Moussa, covers 19 ancient sites in Northern Syria. It culminates with Kaṣr Ibn Wardān, a masterpiece similar in plan and material to the imperial edifices of Constantinople.

This work contains three manuscript fragments attributed to the Asadiyya by the catalog of the Raqqada Library in Kairouan. However, it appears that they do not belong to the Asadiyya, but rather contain scholarly transmissions of Asad b. al-Furāt from Muhammad b. al-Ḥasan al-Shaybānī. Hence they concern Ḥanāfī jurisprudence, not Malikī.

READERSHIP: Scholars and students of archeology, architecture, tourism and history; archeologists; tourist guides; historians; and explorers of ancient ruins and monuments in Syria.

Memory and Commemoration across Central Asia
Texts, Traditions and Practices, 10th-21st Centuries
Edited by Elena Paskaleva and Gabrielle van den Berg

This collective study focuses on a unique undated anonymous primary source on ornamental geometry featuring geometrical constructions and textual instructions in Persian. The chapters interpreting this fascinating medieval source are followed by a facsimile, transcription, English translation, and supplementary drawings.

This book aims to offer a critical perspective on the relationship between locally-based norms and state legal norms on Muslim marriage in Indonesia. It delves into how the state bureaucracy implements and how people negotiate laws on Muslim marriage.

Memory and Commemoration across Central Asia: Texts, Traditions and Practices, 10th-21st Centuries presents new research in the field of Central Asian Studies, focusing on the practice and usage of historical and religious commemoration in Central Asia and Afghanistan.

READERSHIP: This book is of interest to historians of art, architecture, and science, as well as to mathematicians, physicists, artists, and architects.

READERSHIP: Researchers and scholars working on Islamic law and society, Indonesian studies, Asian Studies, Area Studies and Socio-Legal Studies, legal practitioners and public policymakers.

READERSHIP: All interested in memory and commemoration practices in Central Asia and anyone concerned with the history, material culture and cultural heritage of Central Asia, understood in its broadest sense.

Orthodox Christians and Muslims in Cappadocia
Local Interactions in an Ottoman Countryside (1839-1923)

Aude Aylin de Tapia, Albert-Ludwigs Universität, Freiburg

This book traces the history of everyday relations of Greek-Orthodox Christians and Muslims of Cappadocia, an Ottoman countryside inhabited by various ethno-religious groups, either sharing the same settlements, or living in neighbouring villages. Based on Ottoman state archives, testimonies collected by the Centre of Asia Minor Studies, and various pre-1923 hand-written and printed sources mostly in Ottoman- and Karamanli-Turkish, and Greek, the study covers the period from 1839 to 1923 and proposes an anthropological perspective on everyday cross-religious interactions.

READERSHIP: Readership will be mostly institutes, departments, libraries, specialists and students working on Byzantine and Ottoman History, anthropologists and ethnographers focusing on Turkey, Greece, the Balkans and the Middle East, specialists in religious studies and social history.

Edited by David Thomas and John Chesworth with Luis F. Bernabé Pons, Emanuele Colombo, Vincenzo Lavenia, Alain Messaoudi and Douglas Pratt

The Philosophy of the Few against the Christians
An Inquiry into the Textual Transmission of Porphyry’s Philosophy according to the Chaldean Oracles
Pier Franco Beatrice, University of Padua

By harmonizing the teachings of Plato, Aristotle, Plotinus, and the Chaldean Oracles, Porphyry intends to present the complete and definitive philosophic system, with the aim of showing the universal way for the liberation of the souls of initiates and of contextually fighting the final battle of the Greco-Roman civilization against Christianity.

READERSHIP: Beatrice’s approach to the textual history of Porphyry’s Philosophy according to the Chaldean Oracles is strictly philological.

Stranger Cities
Australian Creation and the Ambidextrous Mind, a Profile of Portal Modernity

Peter Murphy, La Trobe University, and James Cook University, Australia

Stranger Cities explores the nature of Australia's distinctive urban civilization with its portal ontology, axial metaphysics, ambidextrous style of thinking, architectonic spirit, and happy phlegmatic outlook. This classic ethos is offset by various choleric and melancholic strands of Australian romanticism.

READERSHIP: For faculty, undergraduate honours students and graduate students working in the fields of Australian society, thought and culture, and the global fields of social theory, urbanism, and architectural, visual, and maritime sociology.

Volume 2, 2023

Edited by Ze’ev Strauss, Hamburg Institute for Jewish Philosophy and Religion, and Isaac Slater, the Maimonides Centre for Advanced Studies

The Maimonides Review is an annual collection of double-blind peer-reviewed articles, which seeks to provide a broad international arena for an intellectual exchange of ideas between the disciplines of philosophy, theology, religion, cultural history, and literature and to showcase their multifarious junctures within the framework of Jewish studies.

READERSHIP: Researchers from the fields of Jewish studies, Religious studies, Jewish thought and philosophy, Christian and Islamic theology, and history.
Sol

Image and Meaning of the Sun in Roman Art and Religion

Steven E. Hijmans, University of Alberta, Canada

With this analysis of Sol images, Steven E. Hijmans paints a new picture of the solar cult in ancient Rome. The paucity of literary evidence led Hijmans to prioritize visual sources, and he opens this study with a thorough discussion of the theoretical and methodological issues involved. Emphasizing the danger of facile equivalencies between visual and verbal meanings, his primary focus is Roman praxis, manifest in, for instance, the strict patterning of Sol imagery. These patterns encode core concepts that Sol imagery evoked when deployed, and in those concepts we recognize the bedrock of Rome’s understandings of the sun and his cult. Case studies illustrate these concepts in action and the final chapter analyzes the historical context in which previous, now discredited views on Sol could arise.

READERSHIP: All interested in the Roman god Sol, Roman religion, ancient solar cults, or the (religious) policies of Aurelian and Constantine; anyone interested in using visual material as sources for Roman religion.

Religion and Academia Reframed
Connecting Religion, Science, and Society in the Long Sixties
Edited by Andrea Rota, University of Oslo

During the turbulent Long Sixties (1955–1973), both academic experts and religious institutions sought to make sense of the profound social, cultural, and religious changes they were witnessing. This book examines how their multifaceted relationships reshaped the study of religion.

READERSHIP: The book is suited for an academic audience in the study of religion, including specialists as well as graduate and undergraduate students. Historians and sociologists will also find valuable insights.

Soul and Self in Vedic India

Per-Johan Norelius

The subject of soul-conceptions in Vedic India has been rather neglected since the early 20th century. The present study – the first monograph on the subject – addresses important gaps left in scholarship by tracing the development of Vedic soul-concepts from the Ṛgveda to the Upaniṣads.

Readership: Students and specialists of Vedic studies or Indology, religious studies (especially the history of religions), and anthropology; institutes and university departments of Indology and religion.

Energy Security has emerged as a critical issue in the field of International Relations. Focusing on the case of Pakistan this book attempts to establish the main actors, dynamics, and contributing elements in the exacerbating energy security situation of the country. The Author supports that clean energy generation sources are abundantly available yet remain unutilized in the Pakistani situation. How much can South Asian Geopolitics and Pakistan’s Partition be blamed for this Energy Security crisis? What political and institutional elements have profoundly deteriorated this situation? This volume highlights the challenges and opportunities regarding the country’s Energy Security.

READERSHIP: The book will be especially useful for research scholars, university libraries, professionals and policymakers working in the field of Pakistani and South Asian energy security.
Wounds of Our Past
Remembering Captivity, Enslavement and Resistance in African Oral Narratives
Emmanuel Saboro,
University of Cape Coast

While the trans-Atlantic slave trade ended in the nineteenth century, slave raiding and dealing and the extensive use of slave labor continued into the twentieth century in many parts of Africa. Using primary oral sources, the overriding aim of this book is to shift emphasis from conventional historical methodology by exploring previously neglected such oral sources.

God’s Interpreters: The Making of an American Mission and an African Church in America and South Africa
Les Switzer, Independent Scholar

This book offers an alternative reading of the relationship between an American mission and an African church in colonial South Africa. The author argues that mission and church were partners in this relationship from the beginning and both were transformed by this experience.

Henry Longueville Mansel
Victorian Theology, Philosophy, and Politics
Francesca Norman, Independent Researcher

In Henry Longueville Mansel, Francesca Norman offers a new interpretation of the thought of an important though often misunderstood Victorian theologian and philosopher. Norman’s study of Mansel brings new insight to the study of Newman, Spencer, Disraeli, Mill, and Maurice.

Ontologies of Violence
Deconstruction, Pacifism, and Displacement
Maxwell Kennel, Northern Ontario School of Medicine University

Through interpretations of Jacques Derrida’s early work, the philosophical turn in twenty-first century Mennonite pacifist theology, and Grace Jantzen’s feminist critique of violence, this book provides a critical theory that neither abandons the concept of violence to subjectivity, nor fixes it in place.

READERSHIP: This book is aimed at specialists in mission studies, at teachers and students (in public universities as well as church-affiliated colleges and seminaries), and at informed readers interested in missions in Africa.

READERSHIP: All interested in key thinkers such as Herbert Spencer, Frederick Denison Maurice, John Stuart Mill, and John Henry Newman, and anyone interested in Victorian theology, philosophy, and politics.

READERSHIP: All interested in ontologies and epistemologies of violence within and beyond French philosophy and deconstruction, philosophical theologies in the Mennonite pacifist tradition, and Grace Jantzen’s feminist philosophy of religion.

Theological Encounters from Hong Kong to Beijing

Edited by Jason Lam, Melbourne School of Theology, and Naomi Thurston, Chinese University of Hong Kong

In this volume, Lam and Thurston present a series of important theological debates between Jürgen Moltmann, the contemporary German Reformed theologian, and humanities scholars based in Chinese metropolises from Hong Kong to Beijing between 2014 and 2018. Featured, along with original essays and newly edited contributions by Moltmann, are the voices of such renowned Chinese scholars of religion as He Guanghu, Lai Pan-chiu, Zhuo Xinping and the contemporary comparativist Yang Huilin. These debates matter because they shed light on themes rarely explored in cross-cultural theological dialogue as it unfolds, showcasing the ongoing relevance of theological critique in and with the contemporary humanities.

READERSHIP: This work will be of interest to scholars and students in Theology, World Christianity, China studies with interests in contemporary issues, philosophy, law, religion, politics, and intellectual history.
