
Twenty-two years ago the Classified Bibliography of the Septuagint, compiled by S.P. Brock, C.T. Fritsch, and S. Jellicoe, appeared, which listed the literature on the Septuagint published between 1900 and 1969 on 200 pages. The present work needs half as much again for a period one third as long, telling figures indeed for the boom in scholarly interest in the Septuagint.

The Bibliography has roughly the same set-up as its predecessor. After 28 headings on various aspects concerning the Septuagint as a whole, no 29, which takes up half of the book, goes into the individual books, and is followed by entries on the Septuagint’s daughter versions and illustrations of the Septuagint. Perhaps a separate section on the deuterocanonical Books (the Apocrypha) would have been convenient. There are no language restrictions; apart from English, French, Italian, and Spanish, the author has included titles in Afrikaans, Armenian, Catalan, Danish, Dutch, Esperanto, Finnish, Georgian, modern Greek, modern Hebrew, Japanese, Polish, Rumanian, Russian, and Swedish. Titles overlooked by Brock, Fritsch, and Jellicoe have been added. In some cases reviews are mentioned. There is an index of authors of the titles (not of the reviews); an asterisk denotes editorial activities (this has not always been done correctly). More indices would have been helpful, such as an index of words and an index of biblical passages.

As P.-M. Bogaert, who wrote a foreword to the book, remarks, the lot of bibliographies is to be cited only to mention their omissions and errors. Errors have been restricted to a laudable degree (for Zopidakis, pp. 193 and 329, read Kopidakis; the “propter name” of E. Teilprojekt, pp. 119 and 327, should read “Teilprojekt E”), but indeed some titles seem to have been overlooked. I will conclude this review by mentioning a number of them (the figures in square brackets denote the sections to which they belong):

P.C. Beentjes, Wijsheid van Salomo (Belichting van het bijbelboek), Boxtel 1987 [29]

P.C. Beentjes, “Na honderdzeventig jaar: eindelijk een nieuw Septuaginta-woordenboek”, Bijdragen 54, 1993, 192-198 [12c(i)]

© E. J. Brill, Leiden, 1995
J. Blomqvist, “Interpretational Problems in the Wisdom of Solomon”, Classica et Mediaevalia 36, 1985, 87-114 [29]

D. Daube, Das Alte Testament im Neuen—aus jüdischer Sicht, Konstanz 1984 [18a]

D.J. Diebner, “‘Mein Grossvater Jesus’”, Dielheimer Blätter 16, 1982, 1-37 [29]

