In 1979, some 300 members of the Society were involved in the Society's annual meetings from other churches or merely from university settings. The more than 600 members of the Society belong to one of the Pentecostal or Charismatic churches, a number which has increased since the first appearance as the Journal of the SPS. The Journal became a major medium for the international discussion of scholarly issues related to Pentecostal and Charismatic studies. Articles have appeared over the years on matters related to the special interest groups of the SPS, namely, biblical studies, history, theology, missions, praxis, economics, and religion and culture. The Journal has provided an economical and an international voice to all.

The staff at Pneuma trust that the Journal will bring the scholarship of the SPS and beyond to the broader awareness of the academy and the churches for the mutual benefit of both.
